

Final Exam Review

Description of the Exam

The exam will consist of four different kinds of questions:

- Identification and Impact (5 or so): you'll be provided with a term and you'll need to give
 - (a) a description of what it refers to, and
 - (b) its significance or importance. Note: All terms will come from the names and terms on this sheet.
- Multiple choice (6 or so)
- Short answer (1 or 2): sort of like the quiz extra credit questions. A couple of paragraphs on a topic we've discussed
- Essay (1): a longer discussion giving your interpretation and analysis of a major theme we've covered.
 - You'll be asked to give an opinion and support it with evidence—three examples from three societies we've studied
 - The other sections cover only since the midterm, but the essay section is cumulative for the entire course.
- For each written section, you will be able to choose from several possibilities and write about the ones you're most familiar with. For example, if you need to answer 5 identifications, I'll give you a choice of 10 or 12. There will be some extra credit.

Approach to Preparing

Make a list of the most important milestone events in the periods we've discussed.

- Causes: Make sure you can identify the most important factors that helped cause these events—including long-term factors ("the environment") and short-term factors ("the spark")
- Legacies: Make sure you can identify the legacies of the milestone event. How did it change the culture, society, etc.? What impact did it have on future milestones and events?

Using this review sheet

- For each of the questions below, see whether you have a strong idea of how to answer, an okay idea of how to answer, or a weak sense of how to answer. Prioritize the "weak" ones in your review from the books and your notes.
 - Approach the questions below as a means of gauging topics to spend more time with as you review, and as a guide to how you'll express and illustrate what's really important. Keep in mind the larger themes of the course.
- Take note of the terms below and review the ones you're unfamiliar with.
- Note that there is seldom one and only one answer to the kind of questions on this review sheet.
 - WHY almost always means "For what reasons...?"
 - HOW almost always means "In what ways...?"
- Concerning dates: I'm not asking for exact dates, but you should know the period in which an event occurs. Also it helps to know sequences—which events occur before or after which other events. You're best off if you know centuries.
- Additional resources: In addition to the textbook, assigned readings, and your notes, a list of resources is linked on the Exams page. These include quiz notes, slides, lecture videos, weekly responses, textual topic discussions from online semesters, maps & timelines, and more.

Preparation for the essays

- Try to come up with possible essay questions and map out in advance examples and interpretations that might pertain.
- List the key topics that might relate to important periods of change, such as wars or reforms that changed everything.
- Discussion groups can be helpful in comparing others' interpretations of topics and ideas with your own.
- In the essays you should be able to talk about, and use as examples, relevant documents from the assigned readings.

Sample Thematic Questions: Following are the kinds of thematic questions you might want to consider as you prepare for the essay. For each question, consider what three examples you would give and the answer they would support. Note that these are examples only and are not necessarily the actual essay questions.

- How does the role of the citizen vary in ancient cultures? What kind of government is most ideal for the citizen?
- How does religion relate to cultural identity? In what ways might religious belief shape society and the state?
- How does war change the societies that wage it?
- What makes for a lasting empire? What factors break down empires or help them survive?
